It will cost you the same for labor whether you use a good and highpriced paint or a poor and cheap paint, and you cannot get a good article unless you pay a good price for it. If you use a cheap paint your house will disclose the fact in a very few months and will soon require re-painting. If you use the best paint you can buy you will secure durability and perfect satisfaction. As labor is the most important item in painting the paint that will wear the longest is certainly the paint that you require, and we need not remind you that the paint that will give perfect satisfaction and the longest possible wear will prove cheapest in

The name of Valentine & Company, which is associated only with the manufacture of High Grade Varnishes, Colore and Paints, is sufficient guarantee that our Ready-Mixed Paints will fulfill every old one properly treated, one gallon of Valentine's Liquid House Paint will cover 300 square feet of surface two coats. It must be borne in mind, of course, that a very porous or rough surface will require more paint than a hard and smooth surface.

THE REASON QUAY WINS.

The Buffalo Courier discussing Quay's ecent victory in the Republican conver ion, observes, "there are enough peopl will unite. It is in the division of the opposition that Quay looks forward to, hopefully, and to judge the future by the past, gleefully." No truer estimate was ever made. If the people who are opposed to Quayism in Pennsyl vania would vote against Quay's candi dates they would be overwhelmed. The vast majority of the people of this state believe in clean and honest government But as the esteemed Courier declares hey are always divided. Even now th Quay emissaries in the Democratic ranks are stirring up strife with the view of di viding the vote of the opponents of Qua and the methods and measures for which he stands. By false charges they are ingendering quarrels which cannot be conciled and carried to the polls or used to keep voters away from the polls will secure the election of Quay's cousin who is so infatualed with the Senato that he will commit any crime he is asked to perpetrate for Quay. It is all right and a healthful sign fo

Democrats to differ with respect to the merits and availability of men talked o for the nomination for Governor. But he discussion of such things should be n good temper and charges or objections mited to the exact truth. The person or paper which falsities to injure a cand: late is doing the work of Quay, and not paid by Quay for the service, it is be cause of stupidity so dense that the work done gratis for which Quay would wil ngly pay liberally.—Harrisburg Star-

LABORERS NEEDED.

Out in Kansas the wheat barvest is great, but the laborers are few, and the verripened grain is falling to the ground. Unless many thousands of harresters can be speedily secured the Kanas farmers will by no means reap as they have sowed. Year by year this problem of harvesting Western cereal crops becomes difficult, increasing in im-portance and magnitude as the wave of rosperity rises higher and higher. As ne cowboys, lumbermen and dashing the cowboys, lumbermen and dashing adventurers of the region are swept further and further away the scheme of intensive wheat farming on a large scale presents new and perplexing complications. There is a field here for inventive genius that should not long remain uncernited.

THE CROPS.

The rains of the last week have bee ery beneficial to the fruit and orchards from which extremely small crops were expected because of the drouth that prevailed. Apples are reported by the farm ere to be -carce, and the dry weather of May and the early part of last month will egult in stunted growth. Peaches will be more plentiful, but they, oo, will not have their usual growth The remainder of the borry season will de pend largely on the weather that is to come. The strawberry crop was almost ained by the drouth. Wheat will be fair. Harvesting ha fready begun. The grain is short in the talks but the heads are fairly well filled. Born has been jumping up under the infinence of rain and warm weather, and a good crop is looked for. Oats will not be so good, but the crop will not be the entire farmers expected. The rains came too shown some improvement since the smith.

Mesers. John H. Slentz, Jos. M. Bushman and Chas. B. Tate returned last Sat arday from Port Henry, N. Y., where their testimony was taken in the case of two Chinamen who tried to enter this and the various Jarge churches of that country on the claim that they had been n business here about 12 years ago as tea merchants. None of the three witnesse could identify the Chinamen. It appear that the Chinamen used the papers of two fellow countrymen who had been here some years ago but returned to China, removing the photographs thereon and sub stituting their own. It is probable that they will be forced to return to China.

a greater or less extent in almost every locality, the success of it depending upon the care and attention given it. We believe that localities often times have something to do with the success of poultry raising, and soils may also have their influence in keeping the flocks healthful. We have in mind now a farmer who owns a farm of 190 acres. which is owned by a middle aged man with wife and three or four children They have a comfortable house and barn and all other needed buildings, including two good hen houses. They have this farm divided so that there is a strip of twenty acres of timber just west of the barn. Through this there is rupning a good sized ravine. On one-half of this tract of twenty acres there are buildings,gardens,orchards and truck patenes, and alongside of them are ten acres of clover and timothy for pasture. The poultry has had the run of all of the tract. The rest of the farm is kept in oats, corn, timothy, cow peas, with a few acres of rye. About 300 hens, with turkeys, geese and other fowls, are kept on this piece, but the greater part of the income is derived from the sale of eggs and chickens.

Now let us see what the income of this family is from their chickens alone. Of course there is no account kept of every dollar's worth of eggs and poultry sold, During the last year, that is, from May 1, 1901, to May 1, 1902, 1,100 dozen of eggs were sold, at an average price of 144 cents per dozen, making a total income $159.50. Several dollars' worth of hens and roosters were sold in addition, besides quite a number of other poultry. All of the groceries needed for the household were bought with the poultry, as well as the greater part of the clothfarmer's wife can secure so large and as steady an income, and at the same time with the least inconvenience, as with the proper care of her poultry.-A writer in the Prairie Farmer. TO TELL AGE OF A HORSE.

"The popular idea that the age of a familiar objects in nearly every household. They are the weapons that have been used for generations to fight old Rheumatism, and are about as effective in the battle with this giant disease as the blunderbuss of our forefathers would be in modern warfare.

Rheumatism is caused by an acid, sour addition of the blood. It is filled with acrid, irritating matter that settles In the joints, muscles and nerves, and liniments and oils nor nothing else applied externally can dislodge these gritty, corroding particles. They were deposited there by the blood and can be reached only through the blood. were deposited there by the blood and can be reached only through the blood. Rubbing with liniments sometimes relieve temporarily the aches and pains, but these are only symptoms which are liable to return with every change of the weather; the real disease lies deeper, the blood and system are infected. Rheumetism cannot be radically and permanently cured until the blood has been purified, and no remedy does this so thoroughly and promptly as S. S. S. It neutralizes the acids and sends a stream of rich, strong blood to the affected parts, which dissolves and washes out all foreign materials, and the sufferer obtains happy relief from the torturing pains.

S. S. S. contains no potash or other mineral, but is a perfect vegetable blood purifier and most exhilarating tonic. Our physicians will advise, without charge, all who write about their case, and we will send free our special book on Rheumatism and its treatment.

Mingling of Cuffs and Love For Her-How the Dispute of Widow Skinner's Rival Sultors Ended. [Copyright, 1902, by C. B. Lewis.] HEN I got along to Uncle Zeb Scott's on my route the other day, he was at the gate and looking so down-hearted that I asked him if any of the family were ill. "It's wuss than that, Abe, a heap wuss," he solemnly replied. "You know, I was married about six months ago."

"Sixty years old and went and married a gal of twenty-two! Folks said I was an old fool, but I went right ahead. They told me that the gal had a bad temper, but I didn't mind it. I thought I could baby her up if she got mad." "And has anything happened, Uncle

Zeb?"
"Heaps of things, Abe, and I want ness and all that, but it don't do no good. Only an hour ago my wife flung a stick of wood at my head. She's a regular wildcat, Abe. She flies mad shout the least little thing, and it's no use for me to say a word. If I started to jaw back, she'd set the house afire. Lord, but what an old fool I was!" "And what do you want my advice bout?" I asked, "She's got one of her tantrums on now, and I believe I ought to go in and box her ears, same as if she was a sulky child. I've heard that some wives jest ached to be bossed and was all the better for being cuffed around. What do you think about it?" "You might try it for a change." "I believe I'll do it. I believe the best way is to mingle love and cuffs together. Yes, I'll go in and tell her she's got to walk chalk or take a cuf in', and you might hang around a few, minits and see how it turns out."

I waited, but not for long. Uncle Zeb hadn't been in the house five minutes before I heard screeching, and next minute be banged the door open and jumped out and made for the barn. His young wife, having the broom in her hand, was close after him, and from the sounds of thumps him in the barn and let him know that she was still boss of the roost. Two miles farther on, at White's Corners, I found Jim Blackburn, White's bired man, and the old man Wilkins, jawing away at a lively rate. Both of 'em wanted to tell me all about it as soon as I came up. It was a case of jealousy. Both of 'em were paying atten-tion to the Widow Skinner, and she hadn't decided which she would marthe frozen mud about—"jest think of an old codger who's had three wives and has one foot in the grave wantin' to marry ag'in!"

"And think of the impudence of the likes of him darin' to look at the Widder Skinner!" howls the old man as be dances around.

"Why, he's got 'leven children!" "And he couldn't buy shoes for &

"Go home and take catnip teal"
"And you go to grass!"
By and by, when they had calmed down a little, I suggested that the widow was the one to decide between them and that they had better walk along to her house in company and have it over with. "T'll go, of course," says Jim, "but I know she'd never marry no old crowbait like him."

"And she'll set the dog on you!" re-off his coat for about the twentiet They didn't have to take a walk. A widow come driving along in her on horse wagon, and it was agreed that I should state the case for both. "Widow Skinner," says I as I met her a few rods away, "here's two mer as is ready to die for love of you." "How beautiful!" laughs the widow. "Each loves you with all his soul, and if you marry one the other will look for a mud puddle deep enough to drown himself,"

"It's really romantic!" she laugh again.

"But what you going to do about it? way or the other."
"So I will," she says, and she beckons em both forward and smilingly told om she'd been married to Joe Wheele two weeks and was just letting ou the news. Then she bid us good day and drove away to look over her shoul der and laugh, and after a long time the old man Wilkins leans against the "Waal, by thunder!"

Then Jim Blackburn gets a brace for his wobbling knees and whispers: "Who'd 'a' thunk it?"

And I heard later on that they stood there looking at each other without speaking a word for a full hour. I drove on, thinking of various things connected and disconnected with the postal laws, and had just turned into the Two Mile road when I overtook Ben Thompson's wife and offered her a lift. I saw that she had been weep-ing, but I asked no questions, and she "Abe, I've left my old man," "Shoo!" says I.

"Yes, I've left him at last, and I'm going to stop with my sister Polly for a few days."

"What's the matter this time?" "Same thing, Abe-same thing that's been the matter for twenty long years. tience is gone at last. I don't believe stood it half as long as I have."

"But what burden have you been called upon to bear?" I asks, not having ever heard of any trouble between

"Jonah and the whale, Abe-Jonah and the whale," she solemnly replies. "The day we was married Ben asked me if I believed the whale swallowed Jonah. I told him I didn't. He said he did and that I ought to believe with him. He's kept it up ever since. He's got up in the morning and asked me, and he's come in at noon and night and asked me, and there have bin days at a time when he wouldn't speak to me. I'm a determined woman, Abe, and I never would give in that the whale swallowed Jonah." "But why not?"

"I dunno, but I jest wouldn't."

"But I'd do it if I were you."
"Do you believe that Jonah was

"But I'd do it if I were you."

"Do you believe that Jonah was swallowed?"

"Can't say, but I wouldn't dispute about it and break up my home. I'd go right back and cave in."

"It would never do, Abe," she says, with a decided shake of her head.

"But why? If you give in, he'd say, no more about it."

"That's the trouble, Abe—that's where the whole thing lies. If I gave up about Jonah, Ben would laugh and cae.

either one of us during this long week speken one single word of cheer to sor rowing humanity? I have gone around selüshiy intent on money making, and you have sat here and bossed the cool around as if the were a slave, and th recording angel has found nothing to our credit. I tell you, Mrs. Bowser, i is not right. Our conduct is simply "I don't feel any stings of con-science," she said as she remembered that the cook had been out two afternoons and three evenings during the week and had came home almost tipsy on two occasions. "And why don't you? Because you have a frozen turnly in your breast. You really seem delighted at the sor-rows of others. You'd go out of your way to say mean things to a man whose heart was breaking. I have known you to read of an earthquake which destroyed 20,900 people at one fell swoop and smile over it."

The family cat had settled herself lown for a quiet evening, but Mr. Bowser's tones warned her that a circus was on hand, and she got ready to take a front seat at the performance. "If you wish me to turn the house into a sorrowful asylum, it can be done," said Mrs. Bowser. "We might dvertise in the papers that words of heer will be spoken here free of cost. "By thunder!" exclaimed Mr. Bow-ser as he rose up, with his right arm sawing the air, "but it's no wonder that pedestrians sheer off from our gate and that stray cats never venare acress our back yard. Intuition must warn them against your cold heartedness. Only yesterday I stood at our gate and sought to coax a homeless dog inside, but he looked up at your windows and howled dismally and fied. Woman, I wouldn't have your heart for all the money ever coined."

Mrs. Bowser wanted to give him back as good as he sent, but prudence closed her lips, and quiet reigned for couple of minutes. It might have a couple of minutes. It might have reigned longer but for another strong blast of wind. Mr. Bowser, who had been walking about, stopped and shivered as he heard it and then made a sudden resolve.

"I shall do my duty whether you do or not," he said as he passed down the "Are you going out?"

"I am. If a few kind words of mine, spoken to men who wander about in these wailing winds with no hope in their hearts, will lift them up for the moment, these words shall be spoken. You needn't sit up for me, and if that plamed old cat is still looking cross eyed when I return I will jump her out of the window."

Mrs. Bowser let him go without another word, and he had not yet turned the first corner when he came upon a man backed up against the fence. He appeared to be just such a man as was ser laid a gentle hand on his shoulder and said: "My dear sir, I know just how you feel, and I don't blame you for it. You have sought for one sympathetic soul in this cold world, but have failed to find it, and your heart"—

"Look here, old cock," interrupted the man as he dung off the hand, "I'm waiting here for my girl to come out and go to the show with me, and don't you get too funry?"

"Aren't you a man with a burden of sorrow?" asked Mr. Bowser as he step-"Not by a jugful, old funny, and you can pass right on. I'm a journeyman plumber, I am, and the burden of sorsolder. If I were you, I wouldn't drink any more tonight."

Mr. Bowser passed on. There was a less when he had gone a block farther and encountered an old woman lugging Are in our spring stock beside a full line of Black Worsteds, Thibets, and Cheviots.

We make our clothes according to your order, with the very greatest care, spring your heart that no one cares whether order, with the very greatest care, spring your heart that no one cares whether "And who be you?" asked the wom-dry work, and if you make a grab at this busket I'll yell out and bring peo "My dear woman, you can't believe any such thing of me. I left my own reside not ten minutes since to"— "Then go back to it. You are either me basket. Off you go or I'll yell out!"

Mr. Bowser tried once more. He tackled a sad faced, hump shouldered refused to sympathize with, but had scarcely uttered ten words when he was interrupted with: "And is it asking me to go some "No, sir. What I wish to let you knew is that I sympathize with you in the way this heartless world has
